

'Out of the depths' (Psalm 130 v1)

Trust and transformation
in difficult times

Mags Duggan

GOD AMONG THE RUINS

Foreword by Tony Horsfall

expressing the depth

‘True lament breaks open the depths of our hearts to God; it is an act of courageous faith which invites God to enter into the pain of the broken-open place and to be God there. The practice of lament has been described as the most profound demonstration of trust in a loving God because it demonstrates an unwillingness to let go of God no matter how awful the situation.’

Image by vecstock on Freepik

'Out of the depths' (Psalm 130 v1)

Trust and transformation
in difficult times

Mags Duggan

GOD AMONG THE RUINS

Foreword by Tony Horsfall

expressing the depth

‘Lament is the opposite of despair which gives up on hope that something can be done, that believes that God is uninvolved and cannot be reached ... and it is worship. This form of worship, this offering up of our pain, honours God because it brings all that we are in the muddled mess of our lives and places it as an offering before God’ (p44)

Image by vecstock on Freepik